

Choosing wedding bands is one of the final steps in the jewelry journey for an engaged couple. dimend SCAASI at 5 S Wabash Ave on Chicago's Jewelers Row offers wedding bands for both partners, with custom design available to ensure the bands work perfectly with your engagement ring and with each other. Wedding band selection begins with the engagement ring. The Chicago custom jewelry band must sit properly alongside the existing ring, whether it fits flush against it, nests within it, or is worn separately as a preference. dimend SCAASI's design team helps couples navigate these decisions with practical guidance based on the specific engagement ring in question. Metal selection for wedding bands involves the same considerations as engagement ring metal choice. Most couples choose matching metals, though mixed metal combinations have become increasingly common and dimend SCAASI can execute both approaches.

Men's wedding bands at dimend SCAASI range from classic plain bands in various widths and metals to bands with diamond accents or textured finishes. The guidance available on men's bands reflects the same expertise and no-pressure approach the store applies to all its work. Women's wedding bands can be designed to complement an existing engagement ring precisely. For custom engagement ring clients who return for the wedding band, the design team works from the original ring specifications to ensure a perfect aesthetic and physical fit. Many dimend SCAASI clients who purchased engagement rings return for wedding bands, and some return again for anniversary pieces and special occasion gifts. The relationship-based approach the store takes with every customer builds the kind of trust that brings people back for every significant jewelry purchase of their lives.
